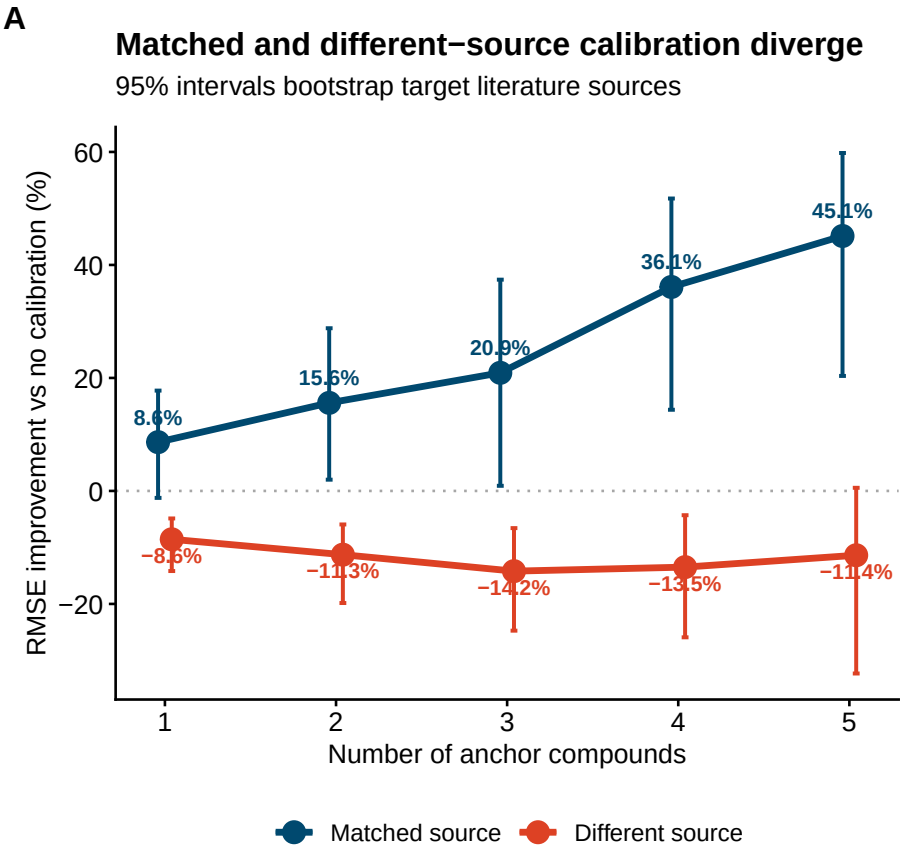
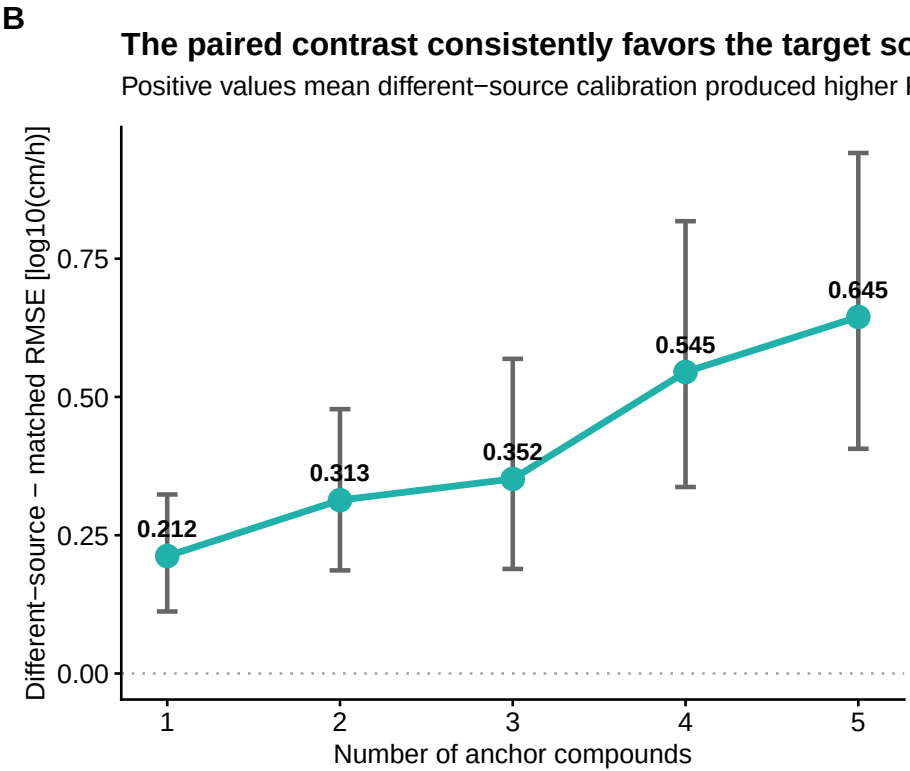
Double−holdout falsification supports a source−specific calibration signal




Both offsets were estimated against the same reference model with the target and donor sources withheld